

In the Middle East, water is at the center of an environmental crisis. But cooperation is restoring hope and harmony.

We are Jordanian, Palestinian and Israeli environmentalists working together to protect our water—and our future.

DONATE

The Middle East water crisis knows no borders.

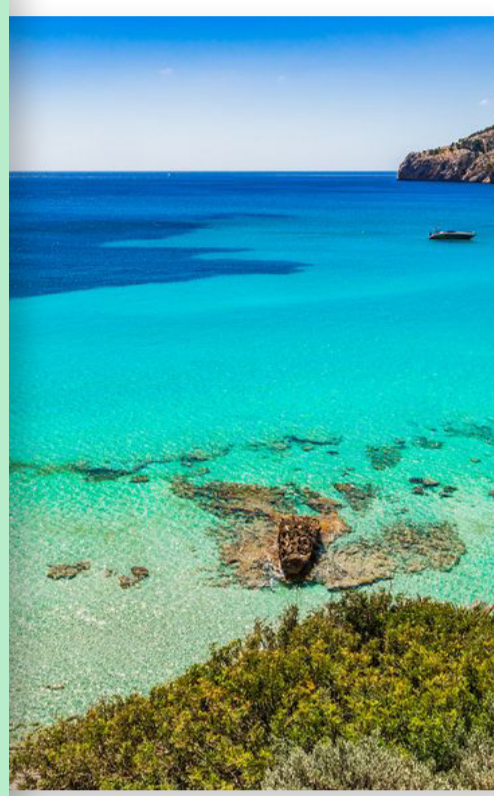

In the most water scarce region on the planet, climate change and conflict have made a problematic situation even more desperate. These are just a few examples of the impact to shared water sources:

THE SEA OF GALILEE

Within the last two years, the Sea of Galilee has been so low from droughts and water withdrawals that it could become another saline lake, like the Dead Sea.

SEE OUR WORK HERE

EcoPeace brings neighbors together to create shared solutions.

Since we all share a single ecosystem, protecting water sources requires cooperation among Jordanians, Palestinians and Israelis.

icon here

WE WORK FROM THE BOTTOM UP

Our bottom-up approach is about educating local constituencies to call for, and lead, necessary cross-border solutions to regional water issues.

LEARN MORE

icon here

WE WORK FROM THE TOP DOWN

Our top-down programs include research, publication of policy briefs, and holding events that advance our policy recommendations.

LEARN MORE

icon here

OUR IDEAS ARE GOING GLOBAL

We share our vision of sustainable management of shared water resources to other water-related conflict areas.

LEARN MORE

DONATE NOW

There is good news from the Middle East!

Fresh water can flow and peace is possible.

The sewage is being treated and being removed from the environment.

READ NEWS, UPDATES & SUCCESS STORIES

“

EcoPeace understands the Middle East environmental crisis unlike anyone else. Their work is critical to the future of this fragile region.

Thomas Friedman
Pulitzer Prize winning columnist for The New York Times

Real change is possible when we all work together. And that includes you!

Your support makes this vital work possible.

DONATE NOW

Subscribe to stay in the know.

Receive updates on what's going on behind the scenes, and get good news when it happens!

First Name

Last Name

Email Address

JOIN!